A CINCHING LAW.

The State of Vermont has a new assessing law, which by virtue of being severely inquisitorial is very effective in bringing to light a good deal of property that once escaped Three years ago, when it went into effect, the taxable property in the State amounted to $100,350,000, of which only $15,037,-000 was personality. Now it amounts to $169,022,000, of which $45,586,000 is personality, showing an increase of forty-five per cent in real estate and a trebling of personality. There was much opposition to the law at first, on account of the oath it exacted of property holders and the scrutiny it exacted of assessors; and it is thought still that some of its provisions are harsh and inequitable; but it has had the effect of securing full returns of taxable property, and preventing concealments-and this makes it acceptable to the people.

Yesterday afternoon, as James Pollock, a rancher, was coming down a mountain with a load of wood, the front axie of his wagon broke precipitating him to the ground and breaking his arm within an inch of the place the same arm was broken less than two years ago. The woman was burned about her limbs and body while trying to extinguish the flames from coal oil, from the upsetting of a lamp. This happened in the evening, and she suffered 15 hours before being relieved by death. A gentleman called at this office last evening to impart a little history of Soren Jensen, the aforesaid husband, and Anna Katrina Jensen, the victim of the burning. Seven years ago Jensen had three wives living in this vailey, and left them to go to Denmark on a mission. In Denmark he became acquainted with the family of Hendrick Jensen, and began paying his amours to the daughter, Auna Katrins. He wanted to save the soul of the young girl in the usual Mormon way, and persuaded her to keep house for him, he at the time being superintendent of missions in that part of Denmark. Back of his office was a bedroom, occupied for a time by the young girl, then by band did not want anyone to minthat part of Denmark. Back of his office was a bedroom, occupied for a time by the young girl, then by herself and Jensen. This caused trouble, as the Danes were not edneated up to such practices, and the matter was reported to Jensen's first wife in this city, who made complaint to John Taylor. This resulted in Jensen being relieved of his mission at the place he was, and being sent to another. This happened about five and a half years ago, and soon afterwards Jensen returned here, bringing the girl with him. His first wife left him, and the other two are living him, and the other two are living in one of the wards of this city, still clinging to the man who is to save them in the hereafter, through their obedience to the bestial Church.

Senator Schooling last evening received a dispatch from S. F. Gashwiler announcing the death of his brother John W., who died suddenly at the Ocidental Hotel, San Francisco, yesterday morning. No man on the Coast was better known than John W. Gashwiler, who was a pionear of the pioneers daring speculator, and with all his faults, one of the most generous men who ever lived. He was in Nevada at an early day, and during his lifetime was the head and front of a number of gigantic schemes, and lost and won as often as anybody. Of late years the tide was against him, and he died a ing one for the consumer. Beef cat tle are scarce, and ewsers are hold ale are scarce, and ewers are holding, waiting for an advance, and alshough the price is higher than last year, it is not likely that if will fall for the next four months. Last year the price was considered extremely high, and in order to supply the demand, many cows and young stock cattle were placed upon the market and sacrificed. This has stopped the increase of stock to some degree, and it will be some years before stockner can retrieve this loss to their herds. There is, however, a manifest disposition among ranchers having small farms and raising a small surplus of farms and raising a small on plus of hay to raise a few beef cattle. At present there is money in beef, and ealizing that a number of years must slapse before the prices for a prime article will depreciate to any extent, they are raising a few head of beef cattle, and in this way it is possible that a beef famine may be sverted.

The President of the United States is the owner of a modest lot in the so called new ground of the Albany Rural Cemetery. Many visitors are attracted there by curiosity, but they do not find upon it anything like the lofty and imposing monuments that crown so many sightly creats or glis-ten in the sun from hillside and vale in this populous and beautiful City of the Dead. Until recently there stood upon it only a pretty, wase-like white marble headstone that marked the resting place of William Lewis Herndon Arthur, his little two-yearold boy, who died July 8th, 1863, and also a substantial dark granite headstone in memory of the mother of Mrs. Arthur, Elizabeth Herndon, wife of the brave Captain William L. Herndon, of the United States Navy, whose memory will ever be associated with the wreck of the steamship Central America. But another stone has lately been placed upon another grave in this inclosure. It is a solid piece of pure white mar-ble, cut in the form of a sarcophagus about three feet high and six feet long, resting upon a substantial base of dark stone. The sides and ends display simple carvings of flowers display simple carvings of flowers and other devices, and upon the top sests the form of a cross. Upon the outer edges, and entirely surrounding the top of the stone, are these words, carved in raised old English text: "Here lies the body of Ellen Lewis Herndon, wife of Chester A. Arthur, born at Culpepper, Virginia, August 30th, 1837; Died at New York, January 12th, 1880."

January 12th, 1880." Honey bees are beginning to be quite profitable in Nevada, now that the soil in most of the valleys are being cultivated, and field and garden flowers produced. The wild flowers afford but poor pasture for bees Buckwheat blossoms yield a grea amount of honey. Some con that the honey from buckwheat is not the finest flavor-that it is cos -but it is really a good, substantial honey, and will never spoil a nicely browned buckwheat cake. We have known !persons to complain that milk tasted too much of the cow. Let those who wish to do a good turn for their bees—one that will lighten their labors and gladden their hearts—sow a small patch of buckwheat. The grain will not be lost, as fowls of all kinds are extremely fond of it.

However, what we started out to say was that persons who keep bees should provide for them something on which they can collect honey early in the Spring. This should be something permanent, therefore should be in the shape of trees that need but little attention after they need but little attention after they have been planted. A fine tree for bees, and a most beautiful shade tree also, is the linden, called basswood in the Atlantic States (Tilia Americans). Early in the Spring this tree is loaded with the most beautiful flowers, to which been resort beautiful flowers, to which bees re in perfect swarms. The seeds of the linden may be procured in any of the Eastern or Western States, and the trees will grow in any place where the cottonwood is found.

White and red elm trees are excel-lent trees to plant for bees. The white elm yields a pollen which is the first food bees are able to find in Spring in the Western States. The pollen is produced even before the leaves appear on the trees, and feeding upon it makes the bees strong and healthy. The linden trees, however, are particularly recommended. It is one of the cleanest trees to be found. No nozious or unsightly insecte feed upon it and the fallage. insects feed upon it, and the foliage is beantiful. It should be introduced everywhere on the Pacific Coast as a shade tree—and as a comfort to the
